Committee: United Nations Human Rights Council (UNHRC)

Agenda: Elimination of racial discrimination with special emphasis on improved treatment of migrants and asylum seekers, questions on discrimination against minorities and human rights defenders

Summary

In a world striving for progress and prosperity, the persistence of racial discrimination remains an alarming reality. The principles of equality, justice, and human rights demand that we confront this issue with unwavering determination. The profound impact of racial discrimination is not limited to individuals but extends to entire communities, particularly affecting migrants and asylum seekers who seek safety and refuge on foreign shores. Till now the delegates have reached a consensus on the plight of refugees, migrants and asylum seekers. In conclusion, the time has come for the international community to realize that we have to take care of our people, and we are one species sharing a profoundly interconnected world, and all humans are 'our people'.
